THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1886.

A SWEDISH EXAMPLE.

In connection with the discussion of industrial education, the following account from the Chicago Mail of the excellent institution founded by a lady in Sweden will be of interest. The summing up of results by the lady herself displays very succinctly the benefits likely to follow the training of children in manual work: "Miss Eva Rhodes has founded an ideal school in Gothenburg, Sweden. She gave up her situation as governess, learned wood-carving and joinery, refused all assistance from the Gothenburgers, and opened a school for children between the ages of 4 and 10. The school soon became famous. It is divided into three departments: First, a Lloyd class for children between 4 and 6; second, three classes preparatory to the official Board schools, where children get the usual elementary knowledge besides their exercise in handicraft; third, a Lloyd class for such as have no opportunity to learn wood-cutting, turning and joinery. Miss Rhodes says that the good effects of the lessons are: First, a satisfaction of the tendency of every child to exercise its hands; secondly, the rousing of an interest and love for work; thirdly, the inculcation of habits of diligence, attention and order; fourthly, the development of self-confidence; and fifthly, a general training of the eye and strengthening of the body."

ANOTHER EXAMPLE.

Georgia has followed in the march of educational progress, by the establishing of a splendid technological school at Atlanta. In a notice of the institution the Constitution says: "A single technological school in a few years converted Worcester, Mass., from a straggling village into a city of 200,000 people, and one of the busiest manufacturing centers in New England. Our school will be quite as finely equipped and officered as the school at Worcester." What a glorious day it will be for Hawaii when her revenues now expended on crazy "fads," to be squandered by a parcel of public robbers, are devoted to the establishment and maintenance of a school of industrial science and art, where her youth may be trained in knowledge and skill whereby they may be able to confer material greatness of enduring nature upon their country.

LAUGH IT DOWN?

The Gazette fondly hopes that bad government may be laughed out of existence in Hawaii. Certainly the method of crying it down has been vainly tested to the uttermost. Satire is doubtless a useful auxiliary in the conflict. But suppose, instead of taking laughing gas themselves for the cure of the body politic, the taxpayers administered to the revenue wasters medicine to make them laugh—on the wrong side of their mouths. Political factions may have been laughed out of sight, but entrenched prerogative has ever required more drastic eradication. If the reconstructed Government is capable of giving an honest and efficient administration, let it lose no time in making a beginning. Otherwise, against the very next development of folly let the taxpayers be combined in a determination that they will pay for no more nonsense, and then by standing to their purpose like men they might secure consideration for their interests and predilections. Leaving the expectations of the two million loan out of the question, let the Government be given to understand now—not through the medium of newspaper articles, but in a black and white manifesto presented at headquarters by a duly accredited deputation from the principal stakeholders in the country—that the ordinary revenues are expected to be strictly applied to the necessary services of the country, and not one dollar thrown away on such utterly useless objects as the Board of Genealogy, South Sea expeditions and the quackery of the Hawaiian Board of Health. Until the taxpayers come to see the necessity of united action of this sort, it is useless to talk of either laughing or crying the country into an era of commonsense. An old resident doubtless hits the mark when he says: "There are plenty of people here to say, 'Go, but' what is required is a few to say, 'Come.'"

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The anti-liquor sentiment in the Southern States must be much stronger than outsiders have any idea of. The Kentucky Grand Lodge of Masons in session at Louisville, a despatch in the Atlanta Constitution says, adopted a resolution condemning the use of intoxicants and declaring saloon-keeping to be a Masonic offense.

Pope Leo XIII. is going to cooperate in the celebration of the fourth centenary of Christopher Columbus, by the publication of Vatican documents referring to the discovery and history of the New World. It is expected that these records will give the world much new light on the early history of America.

A California paper urges the cultivation of the chestnut, saying "there is no fruit tree which requires less attention, nor is less subject to the ravages of fruit pests." A man near Los Gatos has an orchard of the Italian chestnut now coming into fair bearing, from which this year he will realize nearly $300 per acre. This is a valuable hint for those who are going into tree-planting in this country. The chestnut can be planted on land too steep for ordinary crops.

The cultivation and manufacture of ramie and jute are being agitated in the Southern States and California. J. Juvenet, owner of a decorator for the plants, lately sent the New Orleans Produce Exchange the first bale of ramie and the first of jute ever manufactured in the United States, also a bale of ramie to London. Hawaii, it is to be hoped, will quickly enter the race. It will be some time before the American market can be supplied by the home products of these fibres, besides which there are other never-failing markets therefor, not to mention what could be consumed in this country in making different articles, especially sugar and rice bags.

Since the demolition of the Sailors' Home, the thought has occurred to me about the contents of the "corner stone." The Friend of August 17, 1855, gives a lengthy account of the laying of the corner stone, which was done with great clat. His Majesty Kamehameha III. taking a prominent part. The articles deposited might be of interest, and I think should be exhumed and preserved.

On the occasion of turning out the corner stone, a few weeks ago, the HERALD gave a list of the articles contained therein from the Friend. It was announced about that time that the copper box holding the articles would likely be opened at a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Home, which it does not appear has yet been held.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."
